Presented without intermission, these EVENTS consist of complete dances, excerpts of dances from the repertory, and often new sequences arranged for the particular performance and place, with the possibility of several separate activities happening at the same time, to allow for, not so much an evening of dances, as the experience of dance.

STAR NETWORKS AT THE SINGING POINT

"Acting on the theory that one could, perhaps with a naive spirit, design sound-producing circuits in concert, I've sought and found a basic technique for the design of complex oscillators which can be applied, by trial and error, to produce a world of sounds which are at once suggestive of natural sounds and manifestly 'electronic.' Star Networks At The Singing Point is the result of the marriage of that technique to my collection of strange components."
